Course number and section: CORH 499 - 101

Course Topic: Communication Capstone

Credits: 3

Term: 2

Instructor: Jordan Stouck

Course Description (aim for no more than 80 – 100 words for your course description):

This course integrates knowledge and skills students will have acquired throughout the Communication certificate; it is available only to students in the certificate program (to find out more about the certificate, please see: <https://fccs.ok.ubc.ca/degrees-programs/study-options/communications/>). Students will complete a team or individually based project that identifies and addresses a professional, community, or academic topic, demonstrating an awareness of audience and context. Classes will be workshop based, discussing principles of advanced communication and then applying those principles to student projects; at the end of the semester, students will present their projects in both academic and professional contexts.

Prerequisite: 9 credits of CORH certificate courses and third-year standing.
