

Course Description

Course number and section: CORH 499, section 101

Course Topic: Communications Capstone

Instructor: Jordan Stouck

Course Description:

CORH 499 gives students the experience of identifying a communication need, developing a project to address that need, then disseminating and reflecting on their experience. It is designed to apply and demonstrate the skills acquired throughout the certificate or minor in Communications and Rhetoric. You will be guided through the process by course readings and the instructor, who will first assist in developing a project proposal. The proposed project may address an academic communication topic or a community-based topic developed in consultation with course partners and/ or UBC Okanagan's Community Service Learning office. The proposal must be submitted for feedback before being developed into a final project. Students will be encouraged to link their project and public presentation of that project to future career or educational goals.
